[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE RECORD-EXAMINER.]
DOMESTIC.
Grant and DeLong.
WASHINGTON, January 16th.—At the recent meeting of the House Committee on Military Affairs, Representative Stoughton was authorized to call up in the House, at the first opportunity, the bill introduced in the Senate at the present Congress, providing for the placing of General Grant on the retired list.

At a meeting of the committee today, a motion was introduced by Mr. Grant to call up the bill passed by the Senate on the 14th instant, and having for its object the retirement of General Grant, was lost by a vote of 8 to 2. Those opposing the proposition were Rosecrans, Stoughton, Morgan, Wolford, Murray, Connelly, Lyman and Bayner. Those favoring it were Outchouff and Steele.

The Senate Committee on Pensions reported adversely the bill to grant a pension of $30 per month to Emma DeLong, widow of the late Lieutenant Colonel DeLong of Jeannette fame. The report of the majority merely recommends indefinite postponement.

Last Year's Crop.
WASHINGTON, January 16th.—The annual report of the Department of Agriculture, now in press, makes the record of the corn production for 1884, 1,275,000,000 bushels, or nearly 913 millions, and oats 333 millions. These aggregates are the largest ever recorded. The rate of yield is 26.8 bushels per acre, and 23.3 for oats. These are figures for permanent record.

The New York Senatorship.
ALBANY, January 16th.—At noon today Hon. George B. Sloan and Royal B. Searles announced the withdrawal from the Senatorial contest in favor of Evans. Since the announcement of the withdrawal of Russell, friends of Minister Morton called upon the Governor to make a recommendation. He has declined to do so.

The New Carolina Senatorship—Special Election.
RALEIGH, January 16th.—Senator Z. B. Vance was renominated by the Democratic caucus. At the special election for Congress, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Stables, scattering returns indicate the election of Robert H. Vance.

Another Branch of Promise Suit.
CHICAGO, January 16th.—Suit instituted in the Circuit Court yesterday by Alice Cook, calling upon George E. Rockwood to pay $25,000 for breach of promise of marriage. The cause is the latest in a long series of similar cases. The plaintiff is a young lady who is a native of Chicago. After a short season of making her home in New York, she returned to her native city, where she met and became acquainted with Rockwood. He is a young man of considerable means, and is well known in the city.

Robbery at New Orleans.—When Albert Melcher, an Italian, was in the section of the main Exposition building, came down yesterday morning, he discovered that the show-case had been robbed of the contents, which were valued at $1,000. The affair is only another outcome of the unfortunate financial management of the Exposition. The building was placed in the hands of a committee, and the committee has been unable to secure the necessary funds to maintain the building.

Husband Murdered by His Wife.
URICA, N. Y., January 16th.—William Druse, a farmer of moderate circumstances, was found dead in the town of Warren, Herkimer county, this morning. He was killed by his wife, who had been suspected of murder since a quarrel between him and his wife. For several days he had been ill, and his wife had been nursing him. He was found lying on the ground, and his body was covered with blood. His wife was arrested and is now in custody of the authorities.

Murder Confessed on a Deathbed.
NEW YORK, January 16th.—Robert Merchant, of Greece, N. Y., who a few days ago, believing he was dying, confessed to having murdered a peddler in 1862 and buried the body in a cellar, has died. Two men were sent to die in the cellar in which the body was found. The body was found in a state of decomposition, and the men were found in a state of panic. The case is now being investigated by the authorities.

The Extreme Penalty.
EDWARDSVILLE (Ill.), January 16th.—William Felix Henry (colored) was executed here today for the murder of Henry Ross and Henry DePugh, single men, were found murdered in their house at Rocky Ford, about six miles from Alton, in March, 1883. The crime was committed by Henry, who was arrested, convicted, and afterwards confessed the deed.

Synagogue Operation.
SYRACUSE (N. Y.), January 16th.—Frankie Roberts, indicted on whom the criminal prosecution was performed Wednesday, died this afternoon.

Death of a Rear-Admiral.
WASHINGTON, January 16th.—Rear-Admiral Powell is dead.

The Trouble in Hocking Valley.
COLUMBUS (O.), January 16th.—The Senate today adopted the House joint resolution for the appointment of a legislative committee of investigation into the condition of affairs in Hocking Valley, and to make report by February 15th. The resolution makes inquiry as to the causes of the strike.

Terrible Storm East of the Rockies.
CHICAGO, January 16th.—Owing to the snow, trains to-night range from one to nine hours behind time. The fast mails are generally two and three hours late.

CALIFORNIA.
The Transcontinental Association.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 16th.—The Transcontinental Association will not, in this city this week. This is the opinion of several of the railroad men. The last two days have been given over to figures and discussion. What the discussions were and what the figures are, the association has not yet authorized Commissioner Cannon, who is considered the Press Committee, to communicate.

A railroad official who was in attendance today said that there have been many figures made and much hard figuring is to be done. They figure and figure, and I don't believe that they will figure it out at all. But I don't mean to say that there will be a final disagreement, but they will not all get what they want.

Another railroad man said that the division of business in the northern country had been discussed this forenoon. "They all want all the territory they can get, and want it fenced and want the fence paid." This gentleman said. Commissioner Cannon said this noon that he had not been authorized to communicate anything. His position was such that he could not reveal any of the matters discussed. The associations are secret. There are speculations enough about what is happening. It is known that the association has not considered yet the appointment of a successor to Commissioner Cannon. Beyond this nothing can be known to any outsider at this time.

[SECOND DISPATCH.]
SAN FRANCISCO, January 16th.—It is understood that in the Transcontinental Pool Association the percentage allowed the Northern Pacific is slightly less than that heretofore received. This settles the dispute in regard to the occupation of territory and the Northern Pacific will not accept, a further reduction to 3%. The low price of lead and heavy freights are given as the reason.

The Sharon-Hill Case—An Affidavit Day.
SAN FRANCISCO, January 16th.—This was an affidavit day in the Sharon-Hill case. The plaintiff reintroduced the Tyler-Gumpel contract with affidavits of detectives Lees and Holbrook, also of Barnes and Sharps. On the other side affidavits were submitted of Sarah Allrich, Mr. Tyler, and a number of persons who had knowledge of the "Dear Wife" letters in 1880. Also affidavits of the clerk, McLaughlin, who received the $25,000 for the contract of Tyler and Gumpel. These are upon the hearing of the motion for summary judgment. Mr. Gumpel's affidavit reflects strongly against Mr. Barnes concerning his attempting to manipulate testimony.

A Greek Who Met Other Greeks, to Their sorrow.
SAN FRANCISCO, January 16th.—Tom Cannon was to have wrestled G. G. George for $250 at Maynard's to-night, but the latter did not appear. It is said that he has borrowed considerable money from the Greek fishermen and run away.

Petty Thieving in Placerville—Immigration Society.
PLACERVILLE, January 16th.—Two silver napkin rings, belonging to County Treasurer Skinner and Mr. Guler, Superintendent of the Cedar Spring mine, were stolen from the tables in the Carey House last evening. There being two hard cases in town and caught by Constable Thomas Hume and James Bond as they were waiting to board the Grizzly Flat stage this morning. One admitted the theft, and both were held on a charge of petty larceny.

A committee from the El Dorado County Immigration Society canvassed the city today for a fund to carry on their work. They met with splendid success. All the citizens are taking a lively interest in the work, and a boom is sure to follow.

Strikers at Placerville.
PLACERVILLE, January 16th.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon a third unsuccessful attempt was made by the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway officials to move the freight train, which had been held by reason of the brakemen's strike against the "double-header" system of running freight trains. Superintendent Lunn, together with Master Engineer Polman, were tempted to take an engine out of the round-house to attach it to a freight train which they wished to send east. The strikers allowed them to do this, and then ran it outside the round-house, when one of several strikers jumped upon the engine, laid hold of the whistle and blew it vigorously. The engine then responded to quickly by other strikers scattered in and around the yards of the company, guarding the switches, etc. They surrounded Mr. Polman, who had hold of the throttle of the engine, to give place to the strikers, while others assisted Polman to dismount. The engine was returned to the round-house, and the train was not moved.

Late this afternoon Mayor Zollinger issued a proclamation, calling upon the striking brakemen to cease interfering with the movement of freight trains, and warning all persons who had no legal right upon the grounds of the railroad company to leave them, quoting the penalty for interfering with a freight company in its business. What effect this proclamation will have upon the strikers remains to be seen. The railroad officials say this evening that they have no hope of any further than that the situation remains unchanged.

The Dead Governor.
CHEYENNE (Wyo.), January 16th.—William Hale, late Governor of Wyoming, was buried here today under the auspices of the Knights Templar. The weather was very cold, but there was a great turnout of local civic and military societies. Eight companies of United States soldiers attended from Fort Russell.

THEATRE AT BELL.
PHILADELPHIA, January 16th.—It was said here today that an organized movement has begun to prevent the old Liberty bell from being sent to New Orleans. A subscription of $100,000 has been started, and a large sum of money to take legal measures to keep the bell in Philadelphia.

A Week's Failures.
NEW YORK, January 16th.—The failures during the last seven days numbered 420, as compared with 457 the previous week.

FOREIGN.
Must Go to Jail.
LONDON, January 16th.—Edmund Yates, editor of the World, is apparently doomed to undergo four months' imprisonment, to which he was sentenced yesterday by Lord Lonsdale. The Court of Appeal today dismissed his appeal from the sentence.

[SECOND DISPATCH.]
LONDON, January 16th.—Edmund Yates has decided to abandon the prosecution of his counsel to further appeal his case to the House of Lords. After the Court pronounced its decision, Yates surrendered to the officers and was removed from the Court-room and placed in custody.

Severe Storm and Flood.
LONDON, January 16th.—A severe storm is raging at Nice. The sea has overflowed the quay and the promenade. The cellars of the hotels, and even the villas, are flooded.

King Alfonso—Fresh Earthquake Shocks.
MADRID, January 16th.—King Alfonso has arrived in Madrid. A fresh earthquake occurred today in Granada, with slight damage.

simply enormous. Foreign countries have never been educated to recognize the good qualities of the peanut. The bulk of the peanuts are exported. Within the last two years the raising and handling of the "guber," as the peanut is called in the South, has become an important industry. Yet the production of peanuts is concentrated in Eastern Virginia and Western Tennessee along the Cumberland river. The largest markets for peanuts in the world are Norfolk and Cincinnati, and in these cities several large houses do the business. The poorest man's food, about two months ago the most expensive peanut commission house in Cincinnati removed to St. Louis, and will try to make this city an outlet for the product. The business of St. Louis, although two hundred and fifty miles nearer the Cumberland river than Cincinnati, has done only an insignificant trade in peanuts. From the usually large grocery stores and corner-food stands the uninitiated would naturally suppose that Far westward lies a land of world-wide fame. Its products are the life of the nation. In barns retouched, exhaustless in its store Of veiny silver and golden ore. Its fruitful fields are rich in wealth; With gems its waters, and its air with health; Its breezes blow the fragrance of the flow; Its woolly flocks fill and valley glow. Its waving furrows glist with bearded corn. And the wild birds of peace its air-circled song adorn.

THE LUMBER INDUSTRY.—According to the census reports, there were, in 1880, 25,780 lumbering establishments in this country, employing 1,000,000 capital, and producing $145,000,000 of lumber, and $31,000,000 of other products, using $146,000,000 of material, and turning out an annual product of $263,000,000. Of the whole lumbering industry, Wisconsin, 25 per cent., Pennsylvania, 10 per cent., Wisconsin, 10 per cent., New York and Indiana about 6 per cent. each. Few of the Southern States reach a product of over $4,000,000. The principal products are pine, spruce, and oak, red, pine, cedar, poplar,ypress, and cypress. The great majority of the lumber districts are still almost untouched.

As Given in His Official Report
the Governor — Some Caustic Remarks

The taxes on the railroad company for the year 1883 having become delinquent, the State Attorney General, in 1883 by attorneys appointed by the Comptroller. These suits were removed from the State Court to the United States Circuit Court, and the State Attorney General, a tender of sixty per cent. of the face of the tax had been made by the State, and the Court on motion of the defendant to make a judgment against the defendant, which was granted by the Court and obeyed by defendant. The money amounting to $374,812 was paid to the State, and the balance from the years 1880-81 leaves in my hands the sum of $374,812. The suits were then submitted upon a stipulation between the parties, and some additional evidence made necessary by certain changes in the methods of assessment and judgments entered for defendant were then made, and the suits were then appears in these cases, as it seems certain that some definite settlement of the great questions between the railroad companies and the State will be reached before a time limiting the right of appeal lapses. Personally, I can and will take them up, and will endeavor to secure an amendment of the revenue law for the sum collected for the tax of 1883 is payable to the Treasury of the State, but it is not the duty of the Attorney General.

The Attorney-General concludes his report with the following paragraph:

Feeling how worthless than useless any suggestion of mine may be, in view of the many and pressing exigencies of the State, I would close this report with congratulations upon the success of the administration of the State, and to the patriotic parties debtors to the State money to support the State Prison, in exhausting the treasury, and to the patriotic citizens in flooding the country with warrens and the treasury discounted at ruinous rates, employees of the State, while more than half of the State is in debt, and the State lies without interest and almost without security in this office.

Presno county in 1880 had property valued at $7,303,327; in 1884 it had property valued at $14,024,467, an increase of $7,721,140.

anine is further characteristics. Strictly speaking, with the tip of the tongue on the roof of the mouth, the taste is small, a drop of honey or of oil of bitter almonds on that part of the mouth, you will find (no doubt to your great surprise) that it produces no effect of any sort; you may taste it, but it is not bitter. If you put the tip of the tongue on the hard palate, and reaches the true taste region in the middle distance. But if you put a little cayenne pepper or mustard on the same part, you will find that it bites you immediately, and you cannot taste it at all, surprisingly—while if you put it lower down in the mouth you will swallow it almost without noticing the pungency of the stimulant. The reason is that the tip of the tongue is supposed to be the seat of the sense which perceives of touch, not nerves of taste; they belong to a totally different main branch, and they go to a different center in the brain, together with the very sensitive sense of touch, which perceives of small for mustard and cayenne pepper. That is why the small and taste of these pungent substances are so much alike, as everybody must have noticed, a good snuff at a mustard pot producing a similar effect. The sense of touch is a cautious mouthful. As a rule we don't accurately distinguish, it is true, between these different regions of taste in the mouth in ordinary life; but that is because we are not used to it. If we are sensitively, without paying much attention to the particular part affected by it. Indeed, when one is trying deliberate experiments in the subject, in order to test the various sense of taste, it is necessary to keep the tongue quite dry in order to isolate the thing you are experimenting with and prevent its spreading to all parts of the mouth together.

And incident in a rather ludicrous manner—by blowing upon the tongue between each experiment with a pair of bellows. To such undignified expedients does the parent of science lead the ardent modern investigator. The same is true of Dr. Forbes Winslow, the servants, who hold the enthusiastic investigator alter-

Then poets touch the heart, they touch
To finer issues than the brain;
Cavalcades of eager joy begin,
And the glad music is such
As comes to buds with vernal rain,
Sculpture may satisfy the eye
And the painter's hand grace;
Painting restore the form, the place,
When traced from Nature's face to face,
And Music—all that speaks of sound,
Enamored of melodious speech,
Rejoice in their studies, each
To bring; but more profound
Than these the arts that poets teach,
Their Art is Nature. They divine
The hidden meaning to man's being,
They taught, or teach, him all he knows—
First, that of the world, and then himself,
And where he goes, and where he lies,
Of many men and many things
Forgetful—priests that shape his creed,
And rulers that would rule him blind,
He still remembers him who sings,
Who was, and is, his friend indeed.
Green was the laurel Caesar wore,
And the laurel wreath to man belongs
Than Caesar's; that imperial brow
Is bolder than it was before;
Power is the power of force, not so thin!
A Queen and player both drew breath
In good old England's golden prime;
To Shakespeare's Elizabeth
Not Tudor, but his powerful rhyme.
What homage shall we offer these,
Who live, who breathe, who sing?
Pay them the honors that belong
To founders of great dynasties.
Build monuments to their strong,
Build monuments to them beside
Earth's mighty ones—their mightiest;
And the King and the Queen
The ladies where they lived and died,
The graves where their ashes rest!
Master! The monument we raise To thee, O Shakespeare, shall be Built by Nature's hands alone,
Before thee all thy length of days
Shall be as now, and thou art gone!
Poet of Nature! Thy thought for Wart dearest of this western race,
And she whom thou wert first to trace,
Discovered, and thou wast first to name,
She folded thee in her embrace!
A child, she led thee hand in hand,
And thou wert first to name her,
Where still the yellow violets grow
And still the tall forest stand,
And thou wert first to name her ago!
What monument so fit as these,
Which never from thy poet's heart
Were absent—in their noble mart,
Or where they were, the world's great part,
Where still he walked with them apart?
Bring these! O bring the forest trees
That were his bosom's friends,
He would be glad to know they bow
Above him in the summer breeze,
And that the birds are on his brow,
Memorial in Cathedral vast,
He needseth none, nor requiem, save
The music of the wind and wave!
Lest that the world should say
"Like a poor wild flower on his grave,
Lies the great Shakespeare!"
The burial-place of William Cullen Bryant

I made her acquaintance at an Osettlers' reunion. The club, which held its yearly meetings at Gershon, was composed of the surviving pioneers of 1839. All persons who, either as adults or children, had settled in the district covered by the organization previous to January of that year, were entitled to enrollment.

"I expect," they seemed to be saying to themselves as they passed through the fields, "that's what has happened." It was in them the uncertainty of a farmer's hope had bred a condition of morose foreboding. One said the wheat was too strong, and would all be "lodged" before harvest. Another thought that the rains would produce "rust in the stalk." A third predicted a hot, dry time, that would cause it to "fire at the joints."

Old Seth Householder had been a remarkably good shot in his time. Wounded in our saunter to hear him talk about it. He was a grotesque old man with yellowish, curling hair, hanging over his forehead like a curtain. "I presume there's a good many old fellows here," said he, "that minds about the story Hank Sloan kept' over on the old storehouse. He kep' a little stock of groceries, and about 75 of them packages of cornmeal, and buckwheat flour, and sugar, and terbacker, and sugar, and was noted for 'em. Well, one afternoon in the beginning of winter—it was the 31st of November, if I mind right—Hank had ashore some more goods, and he was unloading 'em when the match was 'out, and Hank took 'em over, all but four was marked 'S. Householder.' Yes, that was rather far short of you gentlemen, it's all in the sympathy of the ere. Ther's where it lays." The crowd of people began to stir, and the multitude moved towards the music.

The sweet horns seemed to speak to every word!

There was roll-call, answered to in varying from the robust, mellow tones of middle age to the feeble quaver of the octogenarian. A brief biographical eulogy of a late member was read. The orator of the day was introduced after the speech came the basket dinner under the trees and the afternoon was given to music and story-telling. An address by the former named Manning said:

"I was the first white settler in Deak township. Things was middlin' handy 'long at first. What 'ud folks think of driving thirty miles for a bag of wheat and two plow pints? I'd eat in '37—druv it with oxen, too."

And he was only a boy, but he was good one, strong-limbed and keen-witted. I'd chop all day and study his books 'till I'd clock at night. He'd study the to-day's friends, and maybe some of you know him. He was a good one, a good one, a good one on the platform. He split and laid up his things that fended my first clearing. He went to Congress since, and I'm proud to say he's honest a law-maker as he was fence-maker. I propose three cheers for him. He was a good one, a good one. They were given with energy, and Judge Cawell came down and shook hands with Mr. Manning.

The President of the Club, then asked, "What was the assembly had the personal recollection of a two days' hunt for lost child in the autumn of '41."

"Answer Sunday-school fashion," said he, and about half a dozen hands went up. "Widow Lockery here?" he enquired.

"I reckon she is," came the answer. "Woman's voice from somewhere in the crowd."

"Yes, Lockery," continued the President, "found the child, and if she will tell us about it, I, for one, will be much pleased. I have a vague impression of error which the hunt produced, and the excitement occurred in my child's mind. I do not remember the details. I heard the occurrence fully described by anyone who took part in the search."

He glanced again in the direction where came that prompt response, and sat down. He walked slowly down the aisle bebegin her story, but deliberately took her starched bonnet and laid it on the ground beside her. She was the most remarkable personage I had seen that day. Though fully 70 years old, she was as erect as an Indian, and gave on the impression of great physical power. Her iron-gray hair grew low over her forehead, and was gathered into a great, rough-looking knot at the back of her head, and secured in place by a brass comb. Her complexion was swarthy, and her dark eyes were shadowed by darker brows which almost hid above her prominent aquiline nose. Her "Friends and neighbors: Scenin as how Mr. Evans has sort o' give out that I'm the heroine o' this tale o' horror, maybe it would sound better for some o' else to tell it. It was Benjamin Nyfer's child that was lost. Ben started one mornin' in October to get some grindin' done. There was no mill nearer than the one on Taylor's Fork, twelve miles off, and the way roads was then it would take him away long into the night gettin' to the mill. He was a young fellow, five years old, took a notion to go 'long, but his pa wouldn't let him. He whipped the poor little fellow in the mornin' for cryin' to go, but when he started the child just follered the wagon and bawled to be took in. The other young ones told me that, so I strid in into the house and fryin' him a dough horse, and twistin' him five or six yards of twine for drivin' lines, just went on about her work, and paid no 'tention to him. 'Till he was clean out o' sight. 'Long toward noon Mary Ann Nyfer, the oldest girl, and said Sammy was lookin' for the scare, and away in the mornin' and hadn't come back. I says right away:

"But the girl shook her head and remarked:—
" 'Father never gives in to lust.'"
He's driven him back, and Sammy's to win.'"
He went home with her, and found Luke Wilson there. The three families lived pretty close—all within a mile. Luke thought just as I did, that Nyfer had took the boy along, but the mother and Mary Ann seemed to doubt it. Wilson said he'd go down the road and stop at Pell's and Harder's—maybe little Sam had stopped to play. Well, he didn't find him, and the mother and Mary Ann said he was three or four miles this side the Fork. There was no Sammy with him. He said the child had turned back at the big shingle-tree stump, about a mile from was quite company of the neighbors there waitin' to see if he had the boy. A search was started, and night with lanterns and kerosene oil till morning. Word was sent far and near, that before noon the next day three townships were on the hunt. Horns were blown, bells rung, and the poor baby's name called in hundreds of places. The three townships were scoured and every brush heap and hollow log picked into.

"The search lasted another night and another day, till in the afternoon some one called out, 'The boy's here!' I heard it. I went home and threw myself onto my bed with my clothes on, and slept as I'd never slept before. About 10 o'clock that evenin' I woke up sudden, just as wide awake as I ever was. I said, 'What's that?' It seemed uncommon clear and quick. 'That child can't be far away,' I thought. 'He's been with the rest to the huckleberry swamp this summer.' The trail leadin' to the swamp was a straight line from the stump to the single-tree stump. I'd often heard that lost children would never answer when called, but at night when everything was quiet, they'd cry and make a noise. I'd been well searched, but I still believed he was stickin' somewhere in that huckleberry marsh.

better more than million sorry for Rachel Nyier, because I'd had a dislike to her for quite a while. I was a little bit of a hen, and I wanted a settin' of goose eggs; she had some, and said she'd let me have a dozen for two dozen hens' eggs. Well, we traded, and I s'posed it was all right, till one day she come to me and said she'd give me half a dozen eggs for the same. I said, 'Well, I don't want 'em for she'd opened a goose eggs and then quoke two hens' eggs into it, and it wasn't quoke full. I'd have had half easy half another egg.' I counted out six eggs, and she counted out six, and I said, 'Well, I like Wilson and one of two other women that I was purty thick with, and we made no end of fun about it whenever we got together.'

'I don't like the general make-up of this country. She had five purty children, but she didn't seem to take no kind o' comfort with 'em; just pushed 'em aside and druv ahead with her work. She and Nyier both seemed to think that all the time they was makin' a name for the farm, make a big mind from the word go, and dig away like all possessed, to make property for 'em. But I was there that evenin' when Ben came home without the boy, and I saw them stand and look in each other's faces, and I knowed they was sad. I had come, and neither one could help the other. Then she went about puttin' a bit of supper onto the table; but when she set out Sam's little tin plate and mug, all the mother in her broke down, and she dug her fingers in her hair and sobbed in a way I'll never forget. Well, seem as how I kinder misjudged the creeter for havin' no heart, I felt pushed to make one more try for that poor lost kid o' hers; so I jumped right up and said out to her, 'Well, I'll help you. With the Lord's help, I'll find him.'

"Then I wove over the road just as I guessed the boy had done, turning off on the trail at the big red-oak stump, and right down to the swamp. There I stopped and hid myself in the brush. Sure as there's mercy for us all above, I heard him almost right away.

"'Oh, na? That's a pitiful calf!' Then he cried and whimpered, very weak, like his brother. I was afraid to go near him, but I must make it. I followed that sound and found him easy. He was mired to his armpits in mud and water. I couldn't at first see how I was to get to him. There was a hole in the ground, but I kept back of it, and he heard ground, and the bark was loose. I pulled it off in slabs and threw it 'em onto the hummocks, and so bridged my way out to that little valler heep. He struggled wild when I first pulled him out; then he lay down and I felt his head. He was home in a hurry. There was still a good many people at Nyfer's. They made some milk warm and put a taste of liquor in it, and forced a few drops down his throat, as they do with the sick. I felt that I was Nyfer's mother. He was bathed and rubbed and wrapped in soft flannel, and laid in the baby's warm nest above the fire. Nyfer and his wife stood looking down at him.

"'Rich, said he—end she heard him, her lady's face was white as a sheet, and face all tremble. Then he took her into his arms and held her close. 'Rich, we hasn't loved one another enough, and we haven't loved our children enough. There's that for us!' They will try and keep both of it."

After last, Mrs Nyfer died about five years ago, and he took the family and went back East. Of course I wouldn't have told this story just as I have if any of 'em had been round."

The people had listened closely, and when Mrs. Lockery put on her bonnet and resumed her seat, the hush was so profound that we could hear, high above our heads, the twittering clamor of a nest of young tangers to whom the mother bird had brought a worm.

The next to address the assembly was a noble-looking old man with silvery white

"The widow Lookery," he began, "has claimed all right to this title of heroine. To not let the verdict be rendered till I have finished what I am about to relate. My friend and neighbor for forty years till, I know, pardon me if I for once lift a veil from the passage of her experience which she seldom alludes, and of which any in this audience have never heard. Nothing has been told here to-day, nothing could be told, more strongly illustrative of the courage and endurance of the pioneer spirit, at least of the spirit of one brave anger presented himself at the door of the cabin and begged a night's lodging. He was a Canadian, completely tired out, and far from well. Locked out of his wife had it in them to turn a back stranger from their door; so they gave him a room in the hotel, and the next day he was able to rise, and before night he was back out with the small-pox.

"The following morning when I went out to feed my cattle, I happened to look over the fence into the garden, and saw the ground, half way between the two houses, a woman standing and beckoning to me. It was my neighbor here. I went over and her husband and I went into the garden, half way between the two houses, and told me in a few words about the man with the small-pox, and charged me to watch the road and warn the community. She said she had seen her children die, and was now nursing her own, but she feared for her husband and children. That day I rode eleven miles to the nearest doctor. His wife cried and would not let him go. He read his Bible and said, 'I will do it, however.' He then made up a package of medicine for me, and I started back. I left the medicines and stimulants on the scrub-oak hill, and when I came and got them, the doctor came and gathered her husband and "I can get along alone," she would say, "but I need the Lord giving me strength for all I have to do, and this error must not spread." Everything she needed was furnished promptly and abundantly, and this was all she would suffer as the feeblest form, but Lockery and the little boys, Amos and Willy, were hopelessly bad from the first. One morning the poor woman called to me that both the children were dead, and told me to have two coffins brought to the hill that evening at dark. George Giles and I dug a short, wide grave for a spot on the place where she designated; and that night we took them out, and buried them under her children into them, and buried them with her own hands! One morning some three weeks after, as I went out of my house just at daylight, I saw the Lockerys waiting on the hill. She looked changed and bent, and her hair was loose and flying in the wind. I can see it all now. The sky was with a clear, pale gray, and she looked so sad and so lonely, that I almost turned back from which I had hailed her daily for weeks.

"Thomas died at midnight," she called, "take his coffin as light as possible to the hill."

"Then I shouted back:

"'Ruth Lockery, you have done enough! I will come to-day and bury your dead. At this she threw up her arms and turned away."

"Don't do it, for the love of God! I've seen through all this alone, that no other man need be desolated as mine has been. Don't let this be a mourning or woman dress, come near that awful house I'll draw a rifle on them!"

then they doffed and buried poor man. They drew the body on a stone sled and rolled it in the snow grave beside the other. The next day we saw a fine flame shoot up through the timber, and I knew Ruth had fired her cabin and all the little effects it contained. There she had lived for a year, and she had concluded after what had gone before. We took a pound of sulphur and two suits of clothing on the hill by her order. The ranger got into fresh garments after Ruth had smoked them well. Then she cut his hair and washed his face. "I'll be a fur-trail till," she said afterward, "she knew he'd carry the scent into the next world with him. He took a gun and a pouch of powder and went away, promising solemnly to enter no human habitation for at least a year."

"The weather had turned very mild—was the last of March—and Mrs. Locky begged us not to ask her in for a little while longer. She built herself a wigwam of poles and bark, we took it furnished, and for three weeks she lived out of our house. Then she changed her clothing and came and came among us, pure enough, thought, to mingle with the angels of heaven. The people got together and made a feast, and she took it as a reward for everything for her comfort. She died alone for years, a brave, cheerful, actively helpful life; then she adopted a homeless babe, whom she reared to womanhood, and who now is well married, and has a family."

"Mrs. Locky in her old age as a life's love and duty," [I finished the tale, Our Continent.

HERE IS BLACK IN THE BLUE OF THE SKY.

arted one day at his usual noon.

And looked over, a little way back,
and questioned the sky: "Why do youx with your colour of blue of black,
When you paint the blue of the sky?"
Only because I see it, my child, an painting the sky as it is,
I have said: "It is blue and I smiled;
It is one of earth's mysteries that the light of the light seems to be white,
Nor the red rose an undivided dye;
There is light in shadows, and shadow in light,
And black in the blue of the sky?"
And these are films over nature every where,
To make the things that are not what they seem.
But mortal eyes were not made to bear
the dazzle of shadowless light, or questioned the sky and said: "Why awakening both smile and sigh,
And these are brands of the light," as you said;
There is black in the blue of the sky,
that is then? Are the skies indeed not blue, blackish white, nor the roses red?
In fact, we could never see the crystal dew drops pearls on the path we tread?
No, my child, where there is no blue in the air,
No other colour than the blue of the sky,
where good is absolute and everywhere,
Though blue may step into blue sky
I have read from the leaves of an old-fashioned book,
of one in the gorge unseen,
who said: "The things that are dare not break
before whom the heavens are the throne, and the hope of immorals is in the though
of truth or of truth a force,
at possible evil sullies them not;
So black in the blue of the sky."

HENRY'S [Kidney and Liver] REMEDY is a "hit or miss" compound for old women's nature. It is prepared by a scientific pharmacist, with a full knowledge of the powers and virtues of each ingredient in the class of diseases which it cures. It is purely vegetable, and can not harm the youngest child or the most feeble invalid.

KEEP TRYING.

If boys should get discouraged
At lessons or at work,
And say, "There's no use trying,
I'll never be a doctor."
And keep on shirking,
Till the boy becomes a man,
I wonder what the world would do
To carry out its plan?

The coward in the conflict
Fades at first deadly hour,
If once repulsed, his courage
Never more returns;
The brave heart tries the battle,
Because, through thick and thin,
He'll stand up as a conqueror
His fights, and fights to win.

So, boys, don't get disheartened
Because you're young and new,
If you but keep on trying,
At last you will prevail.
Be sure you stand against the foe,
Try 'em, and try again;
For the boys who keep on trying
Have made the world's best men.

most go, children. I'm sorry to leave you get the dinner alone, but sister is and it can't be helped. She needs most. I'm very sorry papa didn't get here.

— May we have a pie, mother—a whole pie—for our dinner?

— Yes, certainly. A mince-pie and a pumpkin-pie, too. But can your turkey and your chicken keep as long as this is now, and the turkey will be done at twelve. Thicken the gravy in the oven. You know how to do that, don't you?

— I'll think of it. I'll try to do it. I don't believe you could make it if I let you try.

— And I can't do that. I don't want to. There's my train coming now. Be quick, my dear, and as thankful as you can. Good-bye.

And the little girls, running after her to the top of the car, waving their hands, and shouting, "Good-bye! Good-bye!" from the cars stop at the station, and mother getting in, and, as little Nell "hear 'em snail" as they started Serena felt rather drolful at the idea of Thanksgiving day without mother. Languished on the sofa and lamented. Little Nellie got the broom and began to sweep.

"Um, dirks," said she, "I believe we'll have a Fanksgiving dinner if we try, but it'll be backward about talking, but—"

"Mister puts his hands on all that," said Serena, laughing and roused herself.

"I believe I can make a milk-pudding," said Serena, let's try. Mother would care for it. I'll mix it with a little of the stateric emulsion into milk with sweetening opium—and saleratus, I guess. You roll crackers and I'll pick over the raisins."—

"Must heat up some of the eggs too," said she. Dred put plenty of sugar in like it sweet."

"Will?" and Serena scooped the sugar into the bowl. "I'll mix a lot of cracker and much saleratus?" she asked. "I know. I guess about a teaspoonful," Nannie. So the teaspoonful of saleratus in the plums were ready. They were liberal with those, you be sure.

"Here! I believe it's all ready. A little-thing on top. So!"

"That won't go on the top," said Nannie. "I'll mix it up carefully borne the minding dish to the stove. 'What's to come, now?'"

"I'll go up into the grate, I guess," said Serena. They put the grate in the stove and the potatoes were ready. "Ve ought to get the potatoes next, I guess," said Serena.

"I hate getting potatoes. I want to eat them," said Nannie.

"Go out in the barn and have a game of hide-and-seck."

"I'll keep a stove full of wood, and I'll still be right on cooking," said Nellie.

"Nannie thought that would do, so they the stove full of wood and left it.

"There is something about 'hide-and-seek' and some other games, that makes hours seem only as long as one, so the girls stayed out longer than they should.

"When they came in the fire was out.

"O dear! our turkey! There isn't a drop of fire!" said Serena, who was the first to do so.

"To this," said Nannie, joyfully, "Look Nannie's burned all to death! But Nannie and she drew it forward.

"It was black enough on the top.

"Perhaps I'll be able to right under that crust." We can take that off," suggested Serena.

"I must build up the fire again to boil eggs and thicken the gravy." But the fire was built and the turkey was taken from the oven there was no gravy to it. It had all dried away.

"I don't care for potatoes if I can't have 'em. Let's not wait for them. I'm hungry."

"Nellie was over with her little basket and found it all ready, for she had gone directly to the cellar for them when they were in.

"Mother said eat potatoes and turkey," she pleaded. Nellie was conscientious and ate, and ordered her mother to say every letter if she could.

"Nannie wouldn't care, if she knew how it goes. I'm half starved! I can't eat," said Nannie. And she put the turkey in a platter and carried it to the table.

"Nellie tugged out the little pot, and

Nannie and Serena ate a wing apiece slice off the breast. But somehow turkey didn't taste half so good as it used to.

"I don't want any more. Let's try the ring."

They cut away the hard black crust, underneath was soft and full of plums.
 "It's all right," said Serena.

"Well, that she made a wry face."

"What's the matter? And why does it so queer and greenish. I wonder?"

"Shaw!" said Nannie, "it must be
 I put in sugar and plums enough,
 sure."

"Well, taste it," said Serena.

"Well, taste it. She made a wry face,
 sure."

"I don't know what ails it, I'm sure!"

The saleratus was too strong, or a touch of wax was too much. But we can pick the plums?"

They picked plums from out the pudand ate a pie for dessert.

"They were all done here. Nellie had the turkey ready to eat. But she was waiting for waiting, for just as she was to sit down a footstep was heard on piazza, and a glad, hearty voice saying—

"Well, little girls! Father did not get to eat Thanksgiving dinner with you all?"

They told they were to see him. And he very hungry, and couldn't have enjoyed his dinner half so much as they would have done had he been in the dripping and said the gravy wasn't spoiled. It needed some hot water to make it all

With a blessing to it," as Nellie recited. Annie and Serena sat at the table, and to make believe that they were cat-too. But though they shared the ring, and were thankful, too, I hope, couldn't possibly manage to dispose of a good Thanksgiving dinner.—[Jay Allen Youth's Companion.

TWO WAYS.

There are two ways to live on earth—one is to do—to act—to try—things here have double birth; they are born in the mind and true, and in the world where kindness seeks to make the sweet which somehow small; every lip in fondness speaks, and every hand has a heart to give.

"I was on the scale," the butcher said to a miss one day.

"Used to weighing, and," said he, "used to weigh on a weight."

"Yes," came quick the sweet reply, "on lips soon made to kiss; to time you'd weigh and not to rest time you've weighed amis."

Another blushed: he hung his head and said, "I wish I could weigh as nicely wished to weigh the girl—my mind was given away."

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE.

THE SIXTY-THIRD SESSION—TWELFTH DAY.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, January 16, 1885.
The Senate met pursuant to adjournment at 11 o'clock a. m. President Baggett in the chair. Roll called and quorum present. Journal of yesterday read and approved.

During the reading of the journal a motion was made by Mr. Porter to discontinue the further reading of the journal. Pending discussion it was found that the motion had been made in a committee on the journal, and that the motion was not in order. The motion was then withdrawn. Mr. Porter then moved to adjourn until 10 o'clock a. m. on Monday. The motion was carried.

Mr. Lynch said there were a number absent, and he moved a call of the Senate. Lost.
Mr. Davis offered the following:
Resolved, That the Senator receiving the highest number of votes on the next ballot, be provided it be a majority of a quorum, be President pro tempore of the Senate.

Mr. Davis said it was a motion of honor, and that it was not in order. The motion was then withdrawn. Mr. Porter then moved to adjourn until 10 o'clock a. m. on Monday. The motion was carried.

for him to give the necessary attention to such an extent of road. Mr. Meers bill contemplates the division of the roads of each county into sections of equal length, and the election of a board of directors to have the repairing in these separate sections done.

The bill introduced by Assemblyman Davis of Sacramento, relative to a State detective force, provides for the appointment of a State detective force, consisting of twelve subordinate detectives. The chief is to be appointed by the governor, and the State is to be divided into five districts, each of which a detective will be assigned to and made responsible for the detection of crime.

The Assembly Committee on Elections yesterday completed its investigation of the Ballot-Letter case for the seat held by the late, Governor Baggett. The committee unanimously decided in favor of Hartnoll, the contestant, and if the report be accepted by the House, the seat will be given to him.

The action of the Assembly in ordering an investigation of the present condition and immediate action in the case of the late, Governor Baggett, will awaken earnest attention on the part of all vine-growers. The committee on viticulture, headed by Mr. J. G. Davis, has been holding its sessions in the Assembly chamber next Monday.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONFERENCE.

Further Proceedings—The Stockton Platform Reaffirmed.

The Reconciler-Union's telegraphic report of the proceedings of the Convention of Democrats which met in San Francisco Thursday to consider the general welfare of the party, closed with the introduction of an amendment by Mr. Foley to the committee resolutions. Subsequent action was as follows:

REMARKS OF J. W. FOLEY.
In support of his resolution, Mr. Foley said: "The Democratic party is in a very critical condition. It is useless to deny that there has been a great deal of disunity in the party. The platform of the party should be reaffirmed, and the party should be united. We must have a strong, united party, and we must have a platform that will attract the people."
